Part B. CV SUMMARY

Scientific contributions

My research experience includes the participation in 3 competitive national projects funded by the Ministry of Economy and Competitiveness and the Ministry of Science and Innovation and 1 competitive international project funded by the FWO as research team, and the participation in a competitive project funded by the UCM as principal investigator (PI). The resulting research was focused on the study of the mechanisms underlying emotional disorders and their treatment with different science-based approaches. This is an area of great social relevance given the current rates of disorders such as depression and anxiety. These studies included pioneering analytic approaches such as the network analysis, which complemented my specialization in scientific methodology and data analysis. These results have been disseminated with 12 scientific publications in JCR journals and 18 presentations at national and international conferences. This trajectory has provided scientific abilities with the design and implementation of studies, technical abilities with the use of measurement tools and data analysis, leadership abilities with the role as PI and the organization of conferences, and international network capacity with the collaboration in a Belgian project and my working stays in foreign universities. In November 2022, I started working at the Sports Science Research Centre at King Juan Carlos University, with a public and competitive postdoctoral contract, with the aim to reach a transversal approach to health in which mental and physical health impact each other and keeping my interest in science-based approaches to treatment.

Contributions to society

As part of my predoctoral research, I developed an online program for modifying cognitive biases in depression and anxiety under the Creative Commons BYNC-SA 4.0 International License. Furthermore, the result of my participation as PI in the project funded by the UCM Student Observatory gave rise to a training workshop on the impact of Social Networks on the mental health of students. This workshop has already been implemented twice at the university. My collaboration with the company MedeaMind (focused on treating patients using an integral approach with nutrition, physical exercise, and psychotherapy services) and the University of Tilburg led to different dissemination articles that promote knowledge of scientific results in the population. Additionally, my participation in Psycast gave rise to audio-visual resources on mental health for the public.

As part of my postdoctoral research, we are developing a model to evaluate the impact that physical activity and sport have on society, including mental health and subjective wellbeing. This model is intended to be tested in different contexts (countries, cities, centres) and is being externally supervised by the Physical Activity and Health Unit of the Health Prevention Department of World Health Organization to generate a reliable international tool that provides data on the importance of an active life. This contract has already resulted in two reports for dissemination in the private sector (Jiménez et al. 2023a, 2023b), collaboration with the public sector (Fundación Deporte Joven) in the creation of a Strategic Plan against Physical Inactivity and Sedentary Lifestyle in Spain, and an international project for UNESCO to Evaluate Physical Activity, Sports and Recreation programs in Bogotá (Colombia). In parallel, we have created the Spanish Research Network in Social Return of Investment in Sport, recognised by the Ministry of Culture and Sport, and formed by researchers from different parts of the country.

Contributions to training and evaluation

My teaching experience includes both the areas of mental (Psychopathology, Personality, among others) and physical health (Information technologies in the sciences of sport) for university students. Also, I have taught courses on methods and data analysis (“Introduction to meta-analysis”; “TRAINING IN R software”; “Network Analysis: Concepts and methodology”) for the research training of university personnel. I have supervised several Final Degree Projects (Cardenal Cisneros University 2021/2022 and King Juan Carlos University 2023-2024) and one master's thesis focused on European Sports Policies (EuropeActive, 2022-2023). Finally, I have been a member of Final Degree Projects evaluation committees (Cardenal Cisneros University 2021/2022) and I am a volunteer reviewer of scientific articles in different magazines (2020-present).
